

The OKU card from Singapore: what to bring and what to ask

For a family in Singapore whose autistic child is a Malaysian citizen.

One card, issued by JKM, Malaysia's social welfare department.

Who can get it

- Your child is a Malaysian citizen
- A doctor confirms the diagnosis
- Autism is in JKM's learning disability category

What to bring to the JKM office

- The current BPPOKU registration form, collected from the office
- The doctor's report confirming the diagnosis
- A copy of the birth certificate, for a child under 12
- Your child's MyKid number

If you start online with MyDaftar OKU

- Have a passport-size photo ready, at most 100 KB
- For autism, the form still ends at a JKM district office
- Print it, take it to the doctor, then hand it in

Three questions to ask at the office

- Which address do we write, if we have no Malaysian address?
- Is a report from a Singapore paediatrician accepted?
- Which office takes the completed form?

The order

- Collect the current form from a JKM district office
- See the paediatrician with the form
- Sign the consent part of the form
- Hand the completed form in
- Collect the card in person when it is ready

Before you hand it in

- Every part of the form is filled in
- The doctor's part is signed
- The consent is signed
- The copies are in the folder

JKM processes a form only once every part is complete.

In Singapore

The OKU card is a Malaysian registration.

Singapore's own schemes have their own forms.

See our guide: which disability card your child needs in Singapore.